+VG Collaborations: Heritage Resources Centre, University of Waterloo

+VG Architects have been commissioned by the City of Orillia to develop a heritage conservation plan for Leacock Museum. The team strategy includes collaboration with the Heritage Resources Centre (HRC). HRC was established in 1984 to facilitate heritage resources research, education and information exchange at the University of Waterloo.

The organization has continued to expand its resource base through research publication, consulting work and educational programs, within the broad field of natural and human heritage planning and management.

The City of Orillia will benefit from this collaboration, because it expands the perspective of the project team and inspires thought-provoking dialogue about the development of the Leacock Museum project. More information and 'People in the HRC' can be found at: <http://www.environment.uwaterloo.ca/research/hrc/>
